Media profile

The magazine Bayerisches Landwirtschaftliches Wochenblatt is a weekly specialist agricultural magazine, with the largest print run in Germany. For 215 years the weekly publication has practically been part of the family and a nationwide standard in agricultural reporting.

The weekly magazine provides information on all topics in the countryside, that are important to farmers: from news about animal and plant production to agricultural technology and the section “Village and Family”. With its wide variety of articles, the magazine is of inestimable value to all who live on the countryside. The magazine reaches nearly all agricultural businesses in Bavaria and therewith around one third of all agricultural businesses in Germany. Compared to the other regional weekly magazines it reaches with 77,488 distributed copies (IVW 2/2024) measured at 81,560 businesses (destatis 2023) – the biggest part of active farmer.

The magazine delivers news on agricultural policy and current trends in plant cultivation, animal production, agricultural technology, forestry and bio energy to all full-time, part-time and supplementary businesses. In addition it provides advice to its readers on modern business management, marketing, law, finances, and tax. The section “Village and Family” contains practical tips on health, gardening, nutrition, and leisure time.

Furthermore, the magazine is the weekly basic source of agricultural market prices. Regional pages are published weekly for the regions Upper Bavaria/Swabia, Franconia, East Bavaria and Austria, for the Allgäu the insert Unser Allgäu.

The latest news and reports appear on the BLW-Website www.wochenblatt-dlv.de.
